

The label above each pair is what the threads add: almost nothing for one binary, and most of the result for the other

